

About the Authors

All the authors in this book are friends of behaviorology, and some happen also to be members of the professional educational organization, The International Behaviorology Institute (TIBI). Some have written books that have descriptions on the BOOKS page of www.behaviorology.org. Here is a little more about each of these authors:

Nia Barnett: Having worked under various titles to improve interventions and interactions with people of all ages in a wide range of settings, Nia is presently pursuing her Ph.D. in International Psychology, with a specialization in Organizations and Systems, at the Chicago School of Professional Psychology. Her passion is to facilitate understanding of behavior in its various contexts, and to serve as an active role model for compassionate change toward a healthy, thriving, and peaceful global society.

Lawrence Fraley: Having retired from decades of teaching and writing about behaviorology, Larry's recent books consist of Dignified Dying—A Behaviorological Thanatology and Behaviorological Rehabilitation and the Criminal Justice System. You can find them at www.lulu.com (click the magnifying glass and enter his name). Another recent title is About Science, Life, and Reality (available from the usual sources).

Dawn Kutza: While working to improve teaching practices and effectiveness for her business students, Dawn incorporates principles from the natural science of behavior into her teaching methodology. She is a Senior Lecturer at Indiana University.

Stephen Ledoux: Having retired from decades of teaching and writing about behaviorology, Stephen's recent books consist of a two-volume set of 72 newspaper columns each. The first volume is Explaining Mysteries of Living (Expanded) and the other volume is Science Is Lovable—Volume 2 of Explaining Mysteries of Living (Expanded). You can find them at www.lulu.com (click the magnifying glass and enter his name). Both books contain column-supporting papers, and the last paper in the first volume provides an extensive biography.

James O'Heare: James is a behaviorology teacher and international lecturer who has written several books, largely on the behavior of nonhuman animals. With his long and continuing interest in philosophy and specifically ethics, James is an advocate for animal rights and a vegan. Some of his books include Problem Animal Behavior and Functional Behavioral Assessment. You can find his books at www.dogwise.com and his full biography at www.jamesoheare.com.

Michael Shuler: A retired railroad engineer, Mike pursues scientific knowledge of all kinds, especially writings about behaviorology. His publisher recently released his novel, A World of Our Own Making—A Sequel to Walden Two (Expanded) on www.lulu.com (click the magnifying glass and enter his name). This is a book that he wanted to read, not write. But after waiting for about 40 years, he got tired of waiting... (and he donates his royalties to non-profit science organizations).
